Frieda DoerferEier/Eggs*

26.03.16 – 07.05.16

Some years ago, while studying at the Hochschule Pforzheim, Frieda Doerfer became acquainted with the guilloché machine. She was fascinated by the symmetrical and intricate repetitive engraved patterns than can be made with this machine. Ever since then she has been working with this historical technique, adapting it in an innovative manner. Her recent group of jewellery speak to the world-famous Fabergé imperial enamel eggs, which are often also decorated with guilloché.

Katrin Feulner*Arbeiten/Work*

26.03.16 – 07.05.16

The German word Arbeiten, or Work in English, refers to both the process and the result. For Katrin Feulner working, the making of work, is the link between social, mental, and physical activity. She crafts her jewellery from found objects, the function and context of which she often does not know. She disassembles them and then creates sculptural, wearable forms in an intensive and slow process of growth and development.
